Transport professor to chair public forum on public transport

Noted transport expert Professor Graham Currie from Monash University's Institute of Transport Studies will chair a public debate on public transport at Glen Eira Town Hall on Monday evening.

Featuring candidates from the major parties, the debate will look at the hot topic of public transport in the lead up to the forthcoming state election.

Professor Currie said this is a great opportunity to hear what each party will be promising if they win Government.

"Melbourne voters are well aware of the challenges they face every day with growing rail and traffic congestion, lack of services and increasing transport costs. This is an important event which will enable voters to see what solutions each party proposes to these challenges," he said

The debate will include Liberal MLC David Davis, ALP MLA for Bentleigh Rob Hudson and Greens candidate for Bentleigh Brett Hedger.

The public are welcome to this free event organised by the Metropolitan Transport Forum.
